A execução de Tibira do Maranhão trata-se do primeiro caso documentado de morte por homofobia no Brasil

In 1614, a Native Person from Tupinambé Nation was executed, with the consent of the Catholic Church, on a mission in Brazil. He was murdered out of his sexual orientation.

Known as Tibira do Maranhão – tibira is a term used by indigenous people to refer to a homosexual –, his case is the first record of death due to homophobia in Brazil.
